NEWS BY TELEGRAPH

Jackson Elected United States Senator by the Tennessee Legislature on the 30th Ballot.

Hughes, the Pedestrian Ahead in the Walk in New York.

A Report That Sitting Bull Has Surrendered to the British Mounted Police.

Railroad Accident Near Williamsburg, Ohio—Serious Fire.

Death of An Army Officer.

St. Louis, January 26.—Archibald Gibson, a second lieutenant of the seventh United States cavalry and son of a prominent lawyer died here to-day of inflammation of the brain caused by a singular event while he was a West Point student. One day while on parade a spider got in his ear and the rules prohibited his recovering it and he stood in ranks while the creature worked its way into his ear and when he was dismissed his ear was full of blood. This caused corrosion of the bone next to the brain and he has never been completely well since, although having done hard service in Dakota.

Filibustering.

Washington, Jan. 26.—The failure of the democratic majority in the House of Representatives to make up a quorum to-day when the republicans abstained from voting and the marked success of the latter's filibustering tactics will probably lead to a postponement of further efforts to pass the electoral resolution until Taylor, the democratic member who left for Tennessee Wednesday to take part in the Senatorial contest shall return.

About to Dissolve.

Chicago, Jan. 26.—The Journal learns from a trustworthy source that the long established firm of Field, Lester & Co., who are the leading wholesale and retail dry goods merchants of the city is about to dissolve. Lester goes out and a new firm will be organized as Marshall, Field & Co. The dissolution will be perfectly amicable and only effected through business reasons. The members of the firm will neither admit nor deny the statement nor give the particulars.

Sitting Bull.

St. Paul, January 26.—The Pioneer Press has just received advices from its Buford special advices from a runner who reports that he learned at Woody Mountain that Sitting Bull has surrendered to the Canadian mounted police and proposes to go to Buford under their escort for fear of bodily harm. The report lacks confirmation but looks reasonable in the light of late official advices.

Ended.

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 26.—On the thirtieth ballot Jackson received 70 votes, Maynard 25, Rose 1. As soon as Jackson was declared elected he was lifted out of his seat by his friends and escorted to the stand and said that he would do whatever lay in his power to ally all sectional agitation and bring prosperity to the country. He would not only represent the State, but the United States in the broadest sense of the word.

Conference Resumed.

Washington, Jan. 26.—The conference between the Government officers and representatives of the Central Pacific Railroad Company resumed this morning. Shortly before the gentlemen who were engaged in the conference went to the Interior Department where the conference was continued.

The Nicaragua Canal.

San Francisco, January 26.—At the Irish joint meeting of the board of trade or chamber of commerce yesterday a resolution was adopted requesting the legislature to urge Congress to grant the application of the Nicaragua Canal company for a charter.

Thinks He Will Beat.

New York, January 26.—Howard offers to bet that he will beat Rowell's record of 566 miles. He is the favorite, having already beaten his own best record, being now 265 miles. Hughes at two p. m. had 280 miles, Cox 270, Albert 268.

Permit to Pay.

Washington, January 26.—It has just been decided to permit the three percent dividend recently declared by the Central Pacific railroad company to be paid, subject to certain conditions.

Train Ditched.

Williamsburg, O., Jan. 26.—An accident from a broken rail near here ditched a train and dangerously injured several persons. None were killed.

Pedestrianism.

New York, January 26.—The score at noon to-day stood: Hughes, 271; Cox, 268; Albert, 259; Howard, 256; Dohne, 255; Nint, 253. The rest are following at intervals.

Burned.

Watertown, N. Y., Jan'y 26.—The Stock House, Court house and elevator and the Port Lyden Iron Works were burned today.

PERSONAL.

—Judge L. Bradford Prince came up on yesterday's train.

—Mrs. Kohn and daughter, Miss Belle, will start for Denver to-day.

—Messrs. John S. and James Chisum, of Bosque Grande, are stopping in town.

—Mr. B. Stoops and wife started on yesterday's train for a trip down the Rio Grande Valley.

—M. Whiteman left yesterday on a business trip to Denver. He will be gone several days.

—Eugene Rudolph, son of M. Rudolph, of Sunnyside, left for his home yesterday. He has been teaching the school at Rincon for some time past.

—J. M. Thatcher, the general agent of the Adams Express company is in the city looking carefully after the business of their company. He will go east to-day.

—Mr. J. A. Walcott, who has furnished us interesting items from Ft. Union made us a pleasant call yesterday. He has been promoted to the superintendency of the Quartermaster department at the post.

—M. L. Crowell, route agent for Wells, Fargo & Co's Express Co. is in town. He has been inspecting the line of road, which his company is soon to take charge of, as far east as Kansas City, and is now on his return trip.

—Everything was reported quiet in the southern country yesterday. A band of Mesquero Apaches is still encamped near Santa Fe, but seem peacefully inclined. No word has yet been received from the troops.

—A man giving the name of Wm. Hendricks got three months in jail for stealing a duck ulster from the Boston Clothing House.

A New Mexican Giant.

Mr. Powell, of the surveying force of McBroome & Taylor, is the discoverer of a veritable curiosity—a New Mexican giant of the olden time.

While on his last trip with a surveying party, Mr. Powell was doing some work in Rio Arriba county, in the San Juan. In the course of the survey a measurement had to be taken over a projection underneath which was a flat ledge or bench. As the work progressed this ledge came to be examined and far back on it, close to the mountain and fully protected by the overhanging rock lay a wonderful specimen of a skeleton. Part of it was decayed and crumbled away at the touch, but enough of it remained to allow of the whole being measured with a tape line, the conclusion arrived at after this being that the man whose only remnant was now this skeleton must have been when alive at least eight feet high. The bones were thick and long and the skull very large. The lower jawbone was detached from the skull and brought to Santa Fe by Mr. Powell, where it became an object of much curiosity and speculation to anatomists on account of its extraordinary size, solidity and thickness. An illustration of these qualities of the jaw bone was given by one of those examining it. This gentleman is a stout man with a large head, square jaw and a heavy flowing beard. The jaw-bone of the skeleton passed completely around this gentleman's face, behind and all, leaving a space of nearly one eighth of an inch between it and the face to which it was being fitted. This specimen is certainly worthy of a place in the museum of the Historical Society. —New Mexican.

A SNORING CAT.

A Feline Victim of Mince Pie and the Alarm She Produced.

A gentleman residing on Van Buren street has a cat that snores, which is regarded by many as a phenomenon. He first discovered the cat's peculiarity one night last week, when she had been accidentally shut up in his bed-room. He was awakened about midnight by moans which seemed to come from under the bed, and he rose to a sitting posture, while his hair began to stick up like a bundle of excitation fishing poles. It was a wild, weird sound, and one that he had never heard before, and in the stillness and darkness it struck upon his nerves with a ghostly clamminess, as though a cold oyster had been dropped down the back of his neck. The cat was evidently the victim of mince pie, which produced a sort of night-cat-mare, and she seemed to be dreaming of the hour when Greece, her knee in supplication bent, should tremble at her power. By her snore—its length, breadth, depth and cubical contents—it was apparent that the old cat had shouldered her crutch in her mind, and was fighting her battles over again. She was dreaming of moonlit fences, swollen tails and the many wild nights she had put in with other cats, in back yards, yelling over the returns coming in from New York and Indiana. And the wild-eyed man sitting up in bed listened, while his hair rose three cents on the strength of a failure of crops in Europe. His first thought was that some burglar had got under the bed in the daytime to wait until everybody was asleep to rob the house, and while waiting he had been attacked with a cholera morbus, and was dying alone and forsaken, far from home and friends and all whom he held dear. It was by no means a very pleasant prospect, and he half regretted that the man had got under the bed at all. Still, it had been the ambition of his life to slay a burglar, and he had often wished for the time and opportunity to go out and kill enough burglars for a mess. But now that he had one under the bed, all doubled up with the colic, so that the killing of him would be merely routine business, he felt that it would not be right. He had stood with his back toward death on the battle field, years after the battle had been fought, but he thought that this burglar under the bed came more properly under the head of new business. He desired to work upon the enemy's works at once, but he did not want to sacrifice his troops needlessly. He wanted to save his men. He only had one, and it became necessary to employ strategy, for the loss of that one man would defeat the object of the expedition. If he had had a friend sleeping with him who he could throw out as a skirmish line, it would have sort of given him headquarters from which to direct the campaign. But he had not, and it was a game of solitaire. He started to put one leg out of the bed, when it occurred to him that the burglar might have hydrophobia instead of the colic, and was even laying back to spring out and fasten his venomous fangs into something. It was a horrible thought, and the gentleman dodged back and covered his head with the bedclothes. The old cat was now getting into the thickest of the fray, and her snoring was terrific. She seemed to be dreaming of some gallant fight, where she had met her enemy on the plains of Abraham, and they had snatched handfuls of fur out of each other, and shook their tails, jumped around and howled. Under such circumstances a man thinks fast, and the gentleman in bed conceived a plan to crush the burglar at one full swoop, and at the same time to take no risk of death. The bed was a slat bed, and rising up it came down with the force of a pile-driver, springing the slats out of the side pieces, as he expected, and the whole bed was forced through to the floor with a crash. The Turk awoke. That is to say, the cat awoke, and her smothered cries under the bed sounded almost human, until they died away in suffocation. When there was no longer any sound to be heard issuing from under the mattress the gentleman cautiously lifted it back, and there, limp and almost lifeless, lay the family cat. He had been the victim of misplaced confidence. —N. O. Picayune.
